Can AI find your business?

More people now ask an AI assistant to "find me a plumber in Bellville who can come on Thursday" instead of searching themselves. The assistant reads your website and decides. Ten questions, ten minutes, a pen. No tech knowledge needed.

Can the AI read you? Get Found

1	Are your opening hours on your website, in text (not only in a picture)?	☐ Yes	☐ No
2	Is your list of services or products on the website, with what each one is?	☐ Yes	☐ No
3	Is your area or address clear: which suburbs or towns you serve?	☐ Yes	☐ No
4	Do you answer your top three customer questions on the site?	☐ Yes	☐ No
5	Are your hours and details the same on your website, Google and Facebook?	☐ Yes	☐ No

Can it ask you something? Get Enquiries

6	Is there a simple form for a quote or enquiry, not only a phone number?	☐ Yes	☐ No
7	Does that form reach you quickly, by email or WhatsApp?	☐ Yes	☐ No

Can it book? Get Booked

8	Can customers book or check availability online?	☐ Yes	☐ No
9	Would you like a customer to confirm every booking before it goes through? (Most owners say yes. That's allowed: you decide what the AI may do.)	☐ Yes	☐ No
10	If someone asked who looks after your website, would you know the answer? (Your web person or you. Either is fine. Just know.)	☐ Yes	☐ No

What your answers mean

Mostly "no" in questions 1 to 5

Start with Get Found. An assistant can't suggest what it can't read. Begin with your hours as text: it's the easiest win there is.

"Yes" to 1 to 5, "no" to 6 and 7

Get Enquiries is your next step: a simple quote or enquiry form that lands in your inbox or on WhatsApp.

"Yes" to most

You're ready to think about Get Booked: booking and availability, connected to the booking system you already use.

You stay the boss

You decide exactly what the AI may do:

1. Read only. It can share your hours, services and location.
2. Ask. It can send you an enquiry or a quote request.
3. Book with your OK. It fills in the booking, and your customer presses confirm.
4. Book on its own. Only if you switch it on.

Nothing is switched on that you haven't approved, and you can change it any time.

Want us to look for you?

The AI check is free, no pressure, in plain English. We look at your website the way an AI assistant would and send you a short report on WhatsApp or email. It works with the website you already have.

Is this real yet? It's early: Chrome, Edge and ChatGPT Desktop already support it in trial or preview.
